The event was based in a marquee on the green with live music and Cumbria Catering being served throughout the weekend. The festival proved popular with both locals and visitors, with enthusiasts travelling from as far as London!

Early estimates show that 2000 plus tickets were sold for the event, with over 8000 pints of alcohol being sold from the 75 different brands that were on sale, and that the majority of hotels and bed and breakfasts were fully booked!

One of the organisers, Stephen Hart, said that the event had been a huge success and he could not wait to see what next year's festival would hold. Congratulations to everyone involved in these events and keep up the good work!

The standard of the floats at the 2001 Silloth Carnival was as high as ever, even although the Foot & Mouth situation made it much more difficult for the float builders this year.

There were even more visitors on the Green than for many years.
